As a hacker, what are you thinking? Well firstly, let's see what happens when we generate an API key.

First thing that sticks out to me is the specific permissions that are explicitly allowed. There's no "special" hacking needed, you are seeing what's in front of you and seeing if it works as intended! The oauth page is telling us that we can ONLY view our kreative dogs with the api key returned but is this the case? Only one way to find out.

As well as this as mentioned above, if you press "Cancel" sometimes a token is generated anyway but it has no permissions. But is this actually the case? As well as that, can we control the Cancel parameter? We can see in the url "returnTo", but nothing about cancelUrl. Perhaps it works?!
